A small party of suffragettes lent variety to the arrival of the liberals at the Reform club at noon today for a meeting of the liberal party to decide its attitude toward the Lloyd George government. The women greeted the early arrivals with the cry: "Another Wait and See." The suffragettes became more aggressive when Asquith drove up and on being forced into the roadway by police, they contended themselves with cries of "traitor," and other abusive terms. Lord Haldane was greeted with "Kaiser Haldane." When Viscount Grey arrived, the suffragettes created such disturbance that the police had to escort him into the club. The prominent liberals in the house of commons and the house of lords attended the meeting. The crowd, with the exception of the women, gave Asquith and his colleagues a hearty reception.

U-BOAT WAR SUBJECT FOR A NEW NOTE?

STATE DEPARTMENT CONTEMPLATES STRONG PRESENTATION OF FACTS TO GERMAN GOVERNMENT.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Dec. 8.—Official information to the state department establishes the fact that the British ship Marina, sunk by a German submarine with loss of six Americans, was in no sense a transport and was entitled to the immunity of the naval merchantmen. Germany has announced her willingness to offer amends for the destruction of the ship. "Seek Data on Arabia." Great Britain has been asked by the state department for information of the status of the P. & O. liner Arabia, sunk by a German submarine without warning. Germany in a note yesterday cites circumstances which she contends justified the submarine commander in taking the Arabia for an armed transport. To Send New Note. A new note to Germany on the general submarine situation appears to be among possibilities which may come out of the latest activities of the undersea boats. It is added, however, that the purpose of clearing up what appeared to be differences of interpretation in Washington and Berlin as to what Germany's pledges in the armistice covered, especially as to armed ships. Secretary Lansing said today no final course of action had been agreed upon by President Wilson and himself. Although the state department has been going on the principle of deciding each case separately on its merits, it is said today that the number of cases had reached such proportions that some general action would be justified, although it was made clear nothing had been decided upon. It was reiterated again today that the United States stands squarely on the position it took in the past. "We are not going to make a statement that she who holds to the pledges she gave in that case, leave officials to declare there seems to be some differences in interpretation, and then to say one would be to clear this up and make plain beyond question that the United States stands squarely on the principle of international law. No ship shall not be destroyed without warning or having crews and passengers removed to places of safety. All lives on board shall be spared. Without warning, the Italian liner Palermo, on which the state department records show there were 23 Americans, are being collected as rapidly as possible. As there are no indications of any American lives were lost, but from information at hand, the case seems to parallel closely the Arabia and the Marina sinkings.

CLAIMS HIGH WAGES KEEP MEN FROM ARMY

Washington, Dec. 8.—The regular army was 175 commissioned officers and 25,955 men short of its authorized strength June 30 last, and the next day more than 35,000 men under the authorization, according to annual report of Adjutant General McCain made public today. The sudden increase was due to the fact that the first increment of the army increase authorized in the national defense act, became available July 1. The report shows that all branches of the service on a peace footing during present year is 138,887 men and 7,252 officers, while the actual strength on June 30 was 107,641. The report also notes that high wages in civil life have prevented the army from obtaining the recruits it needs, although the largest number of recruiting stations established in many years has been engaged in the task. The report discloses that 71,938 regulars were on duty in Germany, United States July 1, that number including the expeditionary force in Mexico. The report shows that a total of two officers and thirty-three men in entire service were killed in action, while five additional men died from wounds.

ASK CONGRESS FOR INVESTIGATION OF U. S. AGRICULTURE

Marketing and Farm Credits Conference Wants Investigation into Live Stock Marketing.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, Dec. 8.—Resolutions calling upon congress to investigate the entire problem of agriculture in the United States, and calling for an investigation of the marketing of live stock, were adopted today at the closing session of the fourth national conference on marketing and farm credits. The resolution suggests that congress should look into the working of co-operative marketing and buying under government auspices as in Germany, Denmark and other European countries to ascertain to what extent these plans could be applied to place American agriculture on an efficient basis, particularly in elimination of waste. The federal farm loan act was hailed as the first step in giving the farmer working capital at modest interest, and farmers were urged to form associations under the act. The principal address today was by Joseph P. Griffin, president of the Chicago board of trade. Griffin maintained the farmer with a highly competitive market for his grain, and he pointed to the fact that when at the beginning of the great war, wheat, corn, and stock exchanges were closed, the board of trade remained open. While the New York stock exchange was closed, he said, a share of stock was worth only what some banks would pay for it, but grain was quoted publicly and brought what the highest bidder thought it was worth. "It is only in the rural towns that monopoly exists in grain," said Griffin. "I had a little barley elevator out in Iowa some years ago, and the so-called barley king of that day owned half a dozen others. He made the prices and the elevator could not make money. He gave me $5,000 to keep it closed, and that was all that saved me. "Over at Baroda, Mich., where the fruit growers are organized, an independent buyer came there, and it is an actual fact, for I witnessed the blow of a bottle on the head. Meanwhile, peaches were rotting on the ground over there. I saw cantaloupes rotting, too, but I saw a Chicago hotel later when I went into a Chicago hotel for breakfast, I paid sixty cents for one." A delegate asked Griffin how many bushels of grain were raised on corn futures. "Nobody knows, and there is no way of knowing or even making an estimate," he replied. "At a congressional hearing once, I heard one man suggest 100,000,000 bushels a day; another guessed ten million."

Waukegan, Ill., Dec. 8.—Edward McDowell, a farmer near Libertyville, ten miles southwest of here, last night shot his wife attempted to burn his four children to death, and the committed suicide. McDowell is said to have entered the house in an angry mood and in a quarrel with his wife he seized a shotgun and shot the woman in the head. He carried her out in the yard and threw her in a water tub, where she was found later and removed to a hospital. McDowell, thinking she was dead, returned to the house and shot his four children to death in the second floor, after which he locked the door, then set fire to the house, and entering a room on the first floor shot himself in the fire. The house burned down. One of the children, 12 years old, managed to escape from a window, and rescued the other three children, one of whom is a sixteen year old girl.

CHICAGO HAS 39TH ITALIAN SHOOTING

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Joseph Forrelli, 552 West Polk street, was shot at 5:30 last night in Chicago's thirty-ninth "Black Hand" affair since Jan. 1, 1916. As usual the assailant made good his escape, disappearing into the crowd of laborers pouring out of nearby factories. Expected to Die. The police of the Maxwell street station could learn little concerning the wounded man. He was taken to the county hospital with two bullet wounds in the head, and is not expected to live. The shooting took place near Polk and Clinton streets. Forrelli, according to spectators, was strolling along apparently aimlessly when the dust was illuminated by revolver flashes coming out of an alley. The victim staggered and fell while pedestrians fled in a panic. Last night's affair was the fourth shooting in the Maxwell street police district since last Saturday, when one man was killed and another mortally wounded. The victims were Michael Nicotera and Pasquale Marchetti. The latter, a Jeweler, was attacked by a sawed-off shotgun. On Sunday night Tony Totero was ambushed by an unknown assailant and severely wounded.

JONES AND SON OPEN FOR PACKING SEASON

Warehouse on North Franklin Street Has Been in Operation Since Monday—Early Deliveries Made.

C. J. Jones and Son, who have purchased the Pember Brothers' warehouse at 107-109 North Franklin street, have started to sort the 1916 crop of tobacco. They opened on Monday with a force of thirty hands which will be increased as the season progresses. Other dealers are preparing to open at an early date and the warehouses packing the new crop will all be in full swing by the holidays. Early deliveries have also been made at Edgerton, where several warehouses have begun operations. The easing weather of the past week has been favorable to the growers and a large part of the crop has been taken from the shed and will be stripped from the stalk at once. This will mean that a large percentage of the crop will be delivered before Christmas. The quality of the 1916 crop is said

CITY OF PRILEP HAS A STRATEGIC VALUE FOR SERBIAN ARMY

Concerning Prilep, toward which the victorious Serbians and their allies are pressing after having retaken Monastir from the Germans and Bulgarians, the following war geography bulletin:

"Situated at the head of the Pelagonian plain, twenty-five miles northeast of Monastir, long six hours' journey over a rough road before military necessities brought about an improvement of the highway—Prilep, so called, is an important strategic position whose capture by the Serbs would be a material step in the breaking of their homeland.

"Circling the town to the north and east are the rocky Babuna hills, and over these to the north lies the city of Prilep, some forty miles distant. Prilep's value from a military standpoint is due largely to the fact that in this railroadless country even the most important of the roads are indirectly good dirt roads. The most important of these, of course, leads to the southwest to Monastir, the strategic point, another strike due to the fact that the highway, high up among the hills fifteen miles away, a third follows a stony and meandering northwesterly course. The source of the Vardar, the fourth mountain, the Babuna range of hills and leads to Korpril, about thirty miles to the northwest, station on the Salonika-Belgrade railway, the fifth strike east and then northeast to Rosemont, following the bed of the Rajec torrent, a tributary of the Derna river.

"Prilep is dear to the hearts of all Serbian peasants as it found its cluster of villages, one of the nation's most popular legendary superman—Marko Kraljevitich, otherwise King's Marko.

"The ruins of the Castle of King's Son Marko overlook the town, and if the visitor proves to be a sympathetic auditor the guide will not doubt point out to him, in the shape of a rock, the stone which struck the stronghold, the indelible footprints of the master's favorite steed Sharatz. And if you should happen to be in the city on the anniversary of Marko's death, which is celebrated by the Serbs as a festival of the dead, you can prove to your own satisfaction whether there is any truth in the widely credited peasant legend that at midnight the doors of the castle burst open and in his pained charger, although the Marko of the flesh has been dead for 600 years, in an old Serbian tale called 'Marko's Judgment', there is recited this prophecy: 'Kralj King Vukashina, Marko's father, whose chief fortitude was Prilep, speaks the best. Thou Marko, may God have mercy on thee, and ere thy spirit leaves thy body the Turkish Sultan thou shalt serve. Then speaks the dear, dear Dushan, 'Bright be thy face in the Senate; sharp thy sword in battle. Never shall hero surpass thee. And thy name shall be remembered so long as sun and moon endure.

"And here, according to peasant folklore, is how that prophecy was fulfilled: Upon the death of Vukashina, Lazar Grebljanovitch, Count of Sirmium, was elected czar. Bitterly disappointed at the failure of his own dispossessed, Marko threatened the life of Lazar and was forthwith deprived of his life. Penniless and disheartened, Marko turned to the Muslims of Asia Minor. (It should be remembered that it was no disgrace for a Serbian to fight with the Turks provided he was a Turk for a Turkish cause, as was the case in whatever cause slain, was a blessing in the eyes of the Serbians.)

"In time, however, Marko's command was brought west to wage war against the orthodox Prince of the Roumans. Loyal to his Mohammedan sovereign when he came upon the field of battle, Marko's heart failed him when he saw the men of his own faith drawn up against him, and facing the dilemma of choosing between proving traitor to his chief or lifting his sword against those of his faith, he cried out, 'Oh God, do thou this day destroy all those who fight against Christendom, and throw his body on the Christian spears and die without striking a blow.

"Typifying the love in which Marko is held by the Serbians is a historical play, announced for production in a little theatre in Belgrade. As upon all such occasions, the place was crowded. The play widely at variance with the custom, the audience as silence spread over the audience as the story progressed, the people evidently hoping for a turn of events toward the close, but as the last toward the end, the audience with final moment redeemed itself with some magnificent display of courage and self-sacrifice, the mighty heart of one of the adoring peasant group, voicing the emotions of all, gave vent to a despairing sob, and cried out, 'Marko is NO traitor!'

"Such is the popular idol whose home city the Serbs are now striving to regain from the hands of the Bulgars and the Germans."

GIVES ROCK COUNTY CREDIT FOR PLANS

Wisconsin Farmer Comments Upon the Coming Sale of Short Horn Cattle Early Next Year.

In the current issue of the Wisconsin Farmer, Rock county Short Horn stock raisers are given credit for the unique idea of holding a sale of their surplus blooded stock. The article says:

"Rock county, Wisconsin, has started something that other counties could well pattern after. A county Short Horn association was formed some time ago and they now have about fifty members. This fact was a surprise to many, for no one thought there were that many Short Horn breeders in that county. The association is now ready to supply the wants of the prospective Short Horn buyer. About one hundred head of cattle are for sale at this time. This includes cows and heifers and bulls of serviceable age. If you want cattle of the most fashionable Scotch breeding, this association can supply your wants. If you want milking Short Horns the best herds in the state are in Rock county and by writing J. E. Kennedy, secretary, Janesville, Wis., you can get any information you desire. If you want one you get the pick of about 100 head. If you want a carload, we know of no better place to buy.

A Traveling Iron, a Chafing Dish, a Boudoir Lamp, or an Electric Hair Dryer, would bring joy to the Daughter of the house.

HOMESTEADERS TAKE 20,000,000 ACRES OF LAND IN A YEAR

Back to Land Movement Shows Steady Gain According to Secretary of Interior's Report.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, Dec. 8.—Public lands in the United States are being taken up by homesteaders in rapidly increasing quantities, as shown in the annual report of the Secretary of the Interior made public today. Twenty million acres were claimed by private owners in the year ending with June 30, as against seventeen millions for the preceding two years and a still smaller average for previous years.

Of the two hundred and fifty million acres of public land still left in the United States, much of it is in the arid region. The reclamation service, carried on construction work on twenty-four irrigation projects, completed and adding 6,000 farms to territory for which irrigation water is available. Irrigation water is actually going now to nearly 20,000 farms.

The Indian Bureau's work, which is emphasized in the report, is declared, has cut the death rate among Indians seven in ten. The bureau has conducted a campaign to save Indian babies by giving Indian mothers proper care. Hospitals were constructed and additional physicians were employed in the Indian campaign.

Work in the Indian schools was revised to reduce the hours of academic work and to increase the number given to vocational training. A division of the pension office shows 709,572 names on the pension rolls at the end of the year, a decrease of 35,575 for twelve months. Civil war soldiers on the rolls numbered 362,277. Deaths of civil war soldiers during the year numbered 34,362. The pension for pensions for the year was $159,155,000, against $165,518,000 for the previous year.

A patent office gives the number of applications for patents during the year as 70,000. Forty-eight thousand were granted.

The bureau of education report recommends formation of a division of commercial education and a division for the education of exceptional children. Investigations are urged looking to the education of the adult illiterate, and better education for the children in the home.

Aid Mine Development. Commendation is bestowed on the work of the bureau of mines in developing methods of mining low grade coal, lead and zinc ores which, it is claimed, promise to rejuvenate mining in certain parts of the country and make valuable millions of tons of ore that now cannot be mined.

The bureau since its organization has trained forty-one thousand miners in mine rescue work.

Agricultural possibilities of Alaska, still are a matter of conjecture, but in some parts of the territory the harder cereals and vegetables are being grown. Completion of the railroad now being constructed to the Yukon, will do much for the development of Alaska, the report says.

HANSEN HAS CHANGES IN AUTOMOBILE LAWS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Dec. 8.—New automobile legislation will be urged by Assemblyman Carl Hansen of Manitowish before the next session of the legislature. Two men are already busy drafting the bill according to Assemblyman Hansen's ideas.

"I am going to have all the laws affecting automobiles, motorcycles and jitneys codified," said Assemblyman Hansen today. "Then I am going to have a provision that whenever a person obtains a license to operate a car, he be given also a copy of the law, which explains the provisions of operation. Too many people are killed by automobiles. It is because people do not understand the laws. My bill to give every person a complete copy of the laws affecting operation would be a safety first campaign. One in which the operator of the car will be educated. I think it will result in a reduction in the number of accidents in the state."

Assemblyman Hansen said he would reintroduce his bill affecting the storage of explosives. He declared in an interview today that the number of accidents in the past two years as the result of the careless method of storing explosives must be reduced. He predicted that there would be little opposition to his measure this year. For the past two sessions of the legislature he has been attempting to get explosive storage measure enacted into law. Once it was defeated in the assembly and once it passed the house and died in the senate.

"I will introduce this year will be similar to the bill introduced at the last session," said Assemblyman Hansen. "It will provide that any person who desires to store explosives must obtain permission of the chief of police or of the chairman of the town board, so that all may know where the danger is located. I think the bill will pass this year."

me, Sid. I'd be awfully good to you." It hurt her to say so. Indeed, she could not bring herself to say it. In all her short life she had never willfully inflicted a wound. And because she was young, and did not realize that there is a short cruelty, like the surgeon's, that is mercy in the end, she temporized.

"There is such a lot of time before we need think of such things! Can't we just go on the way we are?"

"I'm not very happy the way we are."

"Why, Joe?" She leaned over and put a tender hand on his arm.

"I don't want to hurt you; but, Joe, I don't want to be engaged yet. I don't want to think about marrying. There's such a lot to do in the world first. There's such a lot to see and be."

"Where?" he demanded bitterly. "Here on this Street? Do you want more time to pull bastings for your mother? Or to slave for your Aunt Harriet? Or to run up and down stairs, carrying towels to roomers? Marry me and let me take care of you."

Once again her dangerous sense of humor threatened her. He looked so boyish, sitting there with the moonlight on his bright hair, so inadequate to carry out his magnificent offer. Two or three of the star blossoms from the tree had fallen on his head. She lifted them carefully away.

"Let me take care of myself for a while. I've never lived my own life. You know what I mean. I'm not unhappy; but I want to do something. And some day I shall—not anything big; I know I can't do that—but something useful. Then, after years and years, if you still want me, I'll come back to you."

He drew a long breath and got up. All the joy had gone out of the summer night for him, poor lad. He glanced down the Street, where Palmer Howe had gone home happily with Sidney's friend, Christine. Palmer would always know how he stood with Christine. But Sidney was not like that. A fellow did not even caress her easily. When he had only kissed her arm—He trembled a little at the memory.

"I shall always want you," he said. "Only—you will never come back."

It had not occurred to either of them that this coming back, so tragically considered, was depending on an entirely problematical going away. Nothing, that early summer night, seemed more unlikely than that Sidney would ever be free to live her own life. The Street, stretching away to the north and to the south in two lines of houses that seemed to meet in the distance, hemmed her in. She had been born in the little brick house, and as she was of it, so it was of her. Her hands had smoothed and painted the pine floors; her hands had put up the twine on which the morning-glories in the yard covered the fences; had, indeed, with what agonies of slacking time and adding bluing, whitewashed the fence itself!

"She's capable," Aunt Harriet had grudgingly admitted, watching from her sewing machine Sidney's strong young arms at this humble spring task.

"She's wonderful!" her mother had said, as she bent over her handwork. She was not strong enough to run the sewing machine.

So Joe Drummond stood on the pavement and saw his dream of taking Sidney in his arms fade into an indefinite futurity.

"I'm not going to give you up," he said doggedly. "When you come back, I'll be waiting."

The shock being over, and things only postponed, he dramatized his grief a trifle, thrust his hands savagely into his pockets and scowled down the Street. Sidney smiled up at him.

"Good night, Joe."

"Good night. I say, Sidney, it's more than half an engagement. Won't you kiss me good-night?"

She hesitated, flushed and palpitating. Perhaps, after all, her first kiss would have gone without her heart—gone out of sheer pity. But a tall figure loomed out of the shadows and approached with quick strides.

"The roomer!" cried Sidney, and backed away.

"D—n the roomer!"

The QUARTERBREED

By ROBERT AMES BENNET

(Copyright by Brown & Howell Co.)

"A very great pity," commented the president. "Young and clever, handsome, well educated, good social standing—yet all wasted! Courage—misdirected; no sense of shame; unmoral, rather than immoral. He will ride hard to still harder falls than this one, or else to what the world calls success. But I am too busy a man to moralize. If you will pardon me, ladies, there is to be a cabinet meeting."

He bowed to them, and then confronted Hardy. "Sir, I warned you that if you did not speak in your own defense, you would have no other opportunity. I shall not reverse my approval of the findings of the court-martial."

Hardy had stood an amazed and dumfounded spectator to the rejection and disgrace of his rival. But throughout it all Marie had never once looked at him. If her scornful casting off of Vandervyn had roused any hopes for himself, they must have been dashed when she led Olina away without favoring him with so much as a glance of recognition. There was a slight stoop in his shoulders as he saluted the president.

"If the sentence approved by your excellency does not make association with me scandalous," he said, "I beg leave to express my thanks for the intimation that you will invalidate the fraudulent contract."

Without replying, the president abruptly faced about to his desk. Hardy again saluted, and marched from the room as if on dress parade.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Sentence.
In the anteroom the doorkeeper waved Hardy to a door on the right. It led him into a stenographers' room. He saw the flounce of a woman's skirt behind a revolving bookcase near the far end of the room, and paused. Someone stepped into the room after him, and touched him authoritatively on the shoulder.

"One moment, Captain Hardy—your sentence."

He turned and faced the president's aide with the clear, unflinching gaze of a brave man about to be shot. The aide saluted with punctilious formality. Hardy responded with equal formality. The aide presented an official document, saluted, and withdrew from the room.

For a long moment Hardy stood with the decree of his fate slowly crumpling in his hand. His eyes were fixed on vacancy. Doubtless he was seeing the years of soldierly comradeship and duty that now lay in the past and the vision of the career to which he was to have given the utmost of his powers. He had always loved his profession—and now—

The woman whose skirt he had seen was in front of him before he became aware of her presence. He found himself looking into the cool, half-mocking face of Marie.

"Are you afraid to read your sentence?"

HEAVY COATED TONGUE?
(By L. H. Smith, M. D.)
When you arise in the morning and find that your tongue is thick, broad, and of a pale, dirty yellow color at the base—perhaps accompanied by a dull, heavy headache—you should heed the warning signal that your circulation is sluggish, that you are bilious and have an inactive liver. Especially is this so if your skin is sallow, and the water highly colored in the morning on arising, showing that it contains uric acid. Sometimes the liver is enlarged, and there is soreness over liver and pain in the right side and under right shoulder. At any time, but by all means once a week, you should take a vegetable cathartic. Obtain at your drug store a vial of Pleasant Pellets made up of the May-apple, also leaves and jalap. This is the well known pellet made up nearly fifty years ago by Dr. Pierce, and which can be had for a quarter from any apothecary—simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

CHAPTER I.

The Street stretched away north and south in two lines of ancient houses that seemed to meet in the distance. It had the well-worn look of an old road, shabby but comfortable. It was an impression of home, really, that it gave. There was a house across and a little way down the Street, with a eucalyptus in the window that said: "Meals, twenty-five cents." The Nottingham curtains were pulled back, and just inside the window a throaty baritone was singing:

"Home to the hunter, home from the hill; And the sailor, home from the sea."

For perhaps an hour Joe Drummond had been wandering down the Street. His slender shoulders, squared and resolute at eight, by him had taken on a disconsolate droop. Prayer meeting at the corner church was over; the Street emptied. The boy wiped the warm band of his hat and slumped it on his head again. Ah!

Across the Street, under an old alantree, was the house he watched. A small brick, with shallow wooden steps, and—curious architecture of the Middle West—sixies—a wooden cellar door beside the steps. In some curious way it preserved an air of distinction among its newer and more pretentious neighbors. The taller houses had an appearance of protection rather than of patronage. It was a matter of self-respect, perhaps. No windows on the Street were so spotlessly curtained, no doormat so accurately placed, no "yard" in the rear so tidy with morning-glory vines over the whitewashed fence.

The June moon had risen. While the girl came out at last, she stepped out into a world of soft lights and wavering shadows, fragrant with tree blossoms hushed of its daylight sounds. The house had been warm. Her brown hair lay moist on her forehead, her thin white dress was turned in at the throat. She stood on the steps and threw out her arms in a swift gesture to the cool air. From across the Street the boy watched her with adoring, humble eyes. All his courage was for those hours when he was not with her.

"Hello, Joe."

"Hello, Sidney."

He crossed over, emerging out of the shadows into her enveloping radiance. His ardent young eyes worshiped her as he stood on the pavement.

"I'm late. I was taking out bastings for mother."

"Oh, that's all right."

Sidney sat down on the doorstep, and the boy dropped at her feet. She soothed herself more comfortably and drew a long breath.

"How tired I am! Oh—I haven't told you. We've taken a roomer!" She was half apologetic. The Street did not approve of roomers. "It will help with the rent. It's my doing, really. Mother is scandalized."

Joe was sitting bolt upright now, a little white.

"Is he young?"

"He's a good bit older than you, but that's not saying he's old."

Joe was twenty-one, and sensitive of his youth.

"He'll be crazy about you in two days."

She broke into delightful laughter. "I'll not fall in love with him—you can be certain of that. He is tall and very solemn. His hair is quite gray over his ears."

"What's his name?"

"E. Le Moyne."

Interest in the roomer died away. The boy fell into the ecstasy of content that always came with Sidney's presence. His inarticulate young soul was swelling with thoughts that he did not know how to put into words. It was easy enough to plan conversations with Sidney when he was away from her. But, at her feet, with her soft skirts touching him as she moved, her eager face turned to him, he was miserably speechless.

Unexpectedly, Sidney yawned. He was outraged.

Known, But Not Understood

By REV. B. B. SUTCLIFFE

TEXT—We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.—Rom. 8:28.

There are things we know but do not understand. This is true in the natural as well as the spiritual world. We do not understand how we fall asleep nor how we wake up, but we know we do both. On the spiritual plane we do not understand how all the experiences we meet can work together for good, but we know they do. There would be no need of this text if things went always as we desired or if we always understood why they go as they do. But the text gives us a hint what the Christian has before him.

A Certain Prospect.

The prospect is that certain experiences which will be hard to bear will be met with on life's journey. There will be many things which will cut and hurt and which seem altogether unnecessary and as though it were impossible for them to work for good. Think of John the Baptist locked up in prison. He was a man accustomed from his youth to the great outdoors, the mountains and the plains—the rivers and brooks—the broad noonday sky and sparkling starry heavens were natural to him. He had given his life to God and thousands hung on his words. Suddenly he is thrown into prison for his faithfulness to the Lord. But the Lord was at hand. The Lord with power to speak a word and blind eyes saw and deaf ears heard. And even the bars and doors of the prison were broken and opened. Surely such a one with such power could open more prison doors and set the prisoner free. But though he knew John was in prison because of faithfulness to himself, he gave no sign, nor went to the relief of the imprisoned one. John could not understand, but he could know that this awful experience would work together with all his other experiences for good. Think of Daniel—faithful, true, sincere, a man of prayer and godliness, yet because of the very fact that he was what he was, he must needs go to the lion's den. He, too, could not understand but he could know "that all things work together for good." So in the path of the Christian there lie strange, mysterious experiences that seem to make the soul stagger and the spirit grow faint. There come occurrences which, looked at by sight, seem to be anything but good but seem so evil that they cannot be made to work together for good. They call the Christian to implicit trust in God's purpose and absolute confidence to his ways. In all his experiences he is to walk by faith—not understanding perhaps but knowing that, spite of appearances, all things work together for good. But while the believer has this prospect, he also has

A Certain Promise.

When Peter came to things he did not understand in the dealings of the Lord, he, naturally, wanted to understand. Instead of explaining, the Lord simply said: "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt understand hereafter." This promise each Christian may take to himself, knowing that some blessed day all questions will be answered and he will understand how as well as "know that all things work together for good." We cannot think of John the Baptist or Daniel or Stephen or any of the heroes of faith, who have met trying and bitter experiences which they could not understand, even now finding fault and saying to the Lord: "Thou shouldst have done it differently, O Lord." The Christian may not understand in the present time why the Lord permits the hurt but he knows that all things work together for good and some day he will understand the need for the hard things and how they have worked together for good. And while he faces this prospect and rests in this promise he has

A Certain Provision.

A provision the Lord has made to meet every experience. Irrespective of how deep the hurt he permits or how bitter the cup he presents he makes provision that will keep the heart in perfect peace. The command to the Christian reads: "Be anxious for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God and the peace of God which passeth understanding shall keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus." He cares for us and desires with longing that we should cast all our care upon him. He will comfort, he will sustain, he will uphold, so that in the midst of hard and bitter experiences which cannot be understood, the Christian looks forward to the day when he will understand, while he may enjoy in the meantime the peace that passeth all understanding.

Little Things That Count.

There is nothing too little for such a little creature as man. It is by studying little things that we obtain the great art of having as little misery and as much happiness as possible.—Johnson.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Fourth Quarter. Lesson XI. Revelation II 1-7. December 10, 1916. FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH.

The book of Genesis of any kind whatever always has a subtle charm all its own. The mind naturally delights in tracing and finding the origins of things; what caused them and what were their characteristics at the start. This is pre-eminently so in matters of religion. The importance of the investigation is enhanced by the superlative importance and dignity of the thing investigated.

To answer the question as to what the church was like in the beginning one has only to turn to the "Messages to the Seven Churches of Asia." These were churches founded by the apostles, and, as such, they were not unlike the Master himself, either before his ascension or, as in the case of St. Paul, after that event. In their environment and the elements that composed them they were not unlike other churches of the same period and thus may be considered typical. In point of fact the very selection of seven would seem to indicate a universal survey of the church at that period. As one turns the pages of this photographic album of apostolic churches a painful surprise and disappointment is felt. There can be no mistake in the likeness for it is the Lord himself who draws it. It is a painstaking and unprejudiced analysis of ecclesiastical character and life in its very first generation. The credits are entered with scrupulous care. So are the debits. The balance is easily struck.

Credit is given for moral conduct in its active and passive phases, of endeavor and endurance; for unglorified handling of heretics, especially of the Eusebian theory which divorced spirit from body, affirming that excesses of the latter could not defile the former. Credit is also given for steadfastness even while martyr-fires were burning. Love, faith, service, good works, patience are additional items.

But the debit side is black with confounding entries. In the former, Balaam-justified fornication—profession without corresponding life, lukewarmness. The balance to credit is confessedly and disappointingly small. Where is the purity, faith and seal one might fairly expect to find in an organization fresh from the hand of its originator? The investigator in the origin of the church finds himself signed up short. He must account for a situation like that. It begins to dawn upon a mind not already sold out to a preconceived theory, that the church in the beginning was not a miraculous affair, starting with a full-fledged life, but on the contrary, was an evolution, gradual and subject to reversions. It was composed of comparatively small groups of people, mostly uneducated, but lately rescued from paganism. These found it hard to quickly and entirely rid themselves of beliefs and customs drunk in with their mother's milk. The environment of these small communities was in each instance singularly and subtly hostile. Paganistic heresies were ready to fasten to the new life and suck its blood. It cost much to confess oneself a Christian. To do so was to be boycotted in business, ostracized in society, cast into prison and often led to the arena or the stake. "Tribulation" and "poverty" sum up the life of the church at the start.

The Message to the Seven Churches was in truth a factor in the evolution of these churches and all others similarly located at that time. Faults were delineated with a faithful and unerring hand. It was done, not censoriously, but with the kindly purpose to aid in their correction. Virtues were as gladly pictured and to the end they might be preserved in, spite of all untoward circumstances.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

The answer to the pessimistic question, "Why were the former days better than these?" is "They were not." Take for example the church. From St. John's photograph it is plain to see that the church at the close of the apostolic age was not as good as it is today, freely confessing its current defects. The church in its normal conception of it is not an organization lifted out of the category of human life and the laws which govern that life. In any age or place, it is simply a company of those who bear the name of Christ and seek to live his life. It is in no case a body of ideally perfect individuals, but on the contrary of those who, with human infirmities and limitations, seek the evolution of the loftiest ideal of character yet discovered. In any such company there must needs be lapses and reversions.

This is not a matter of mere antiquarian research. The present material condition of the seven cities here named, be it good or bad, has no necessary connection with their moral condition, good or bad, two thousand years ago. And if the cities were good and prosperous it is a mere coincidence. And if the cities which contained bad churches are now in ruins it proves nothing. The person who refuses to ally himself with the church, because of its alleged imperfections, is inconsistent. He accepts other perfection in out demanding absolute perfection in the church. It could be shown that the evolution of an ideal life, striving to correct its errors and evils and to accomplish a beneficent work for humanity, then to refuse its communion and even seek its destruction, would be justifiable. So, humanly speaking, the destiny of the church is in the hands of its members. This should be another and powerful incentive to consistency in the part of every communicant. In this sense each is a defender of the faith.

December 10, 1916. 1 Kings XXI. 15-20

DEFY EVIL.

There is red blood in the highest type of religion. Is it virile and upstanding? Any other conception is erroneous and unworthy. Not that religion carries a chip on its shoulder and spoils for a fight. But when it comes face to face with moral evil of any kind or in any place or in any person it does not pussy-foot. On the contrary it challenges and rebukes manfully. More than once in modern times as well as in ancient it has said with a clarion ring to the king himself, "Thou art the man!" Policy has no place in its program. Personal considerations cut no figure. If this high standard was lived up to by clergy and laity alike, religion would make a strong appeal to vigorous and candid youth than it now seems to. The devil is still to be resisted. St. Paul's figure of the Christian capable is not effete. But to be an effective rebuker of evil one must himself be palpably free from the evil he rebukes or in fact any kindred evil. Otherwise the rebuke sticks in his throat.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Madison, Wis., Dec. 8.—The delayed meeting of the governors' conference will be held at Washington, D. C., next week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Dec. 14-16. This announcement was made by Secretary Miles C. Rely of the conference today after hearing from several of the governors. The meeting was to have been called at Salt Lake City, during the summer, but was delayed on account of the sending of the state troops to the border. More than half of the governors and seven governors elect have responded to the call to be present.

The high cost of living and the method of checking the increasing prices on necessities of life will be one of the leading topics of discussion. No paper on the subject has as yet been assigned, although several have agreed to take part in the discussion, which will be led by Governor William Spry, Utah; Stewart, Montana; Henderson, Alabama; and Alexander, Idaho.

Governor Emerson C. Harrington, Maryland, will deliver an address on the "Executive Budget System," and there will also be a discussion on the enforcement of prohibitory laws in those states which have them.

The plan suggested in the republican national platform of giving the interstate commerce commission many of the powers now exercised by the state railroad commissions is on the list of topics for discussion. This discussion will be led by Governor Eliot W. Major, of Missouri. The subject of the Gulf Waterway is a topic which has been assigned for discussion by Governor E. F. Dunne of Illinois.

The visiting executives and their wives will be the guests at dinner at the white house on Thursday, Dec. 14. On Saturday the governors will visit Mount Vernon on board a special boat, as the guests of Secretary Dan-iel.

ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS ON FIRING LINE AT WASHINGTON; TURN GUNS ON LOBBY

The suffrage workers have established a strong lobby at the national capital, and the anti-suffragists have countered by naming a committee to fight against the proposed suffrage amendment. Among its prominent members are Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the secretary of state; Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, president of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, Jr., wife of Senator Wadsworth of New York.

PROPOSE SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT FIGHT

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, Dec. 8.—The national association opposed to woman suffrage held business sessions today to discuss plans for fighting the federal suffrage amendment, and to elect officers. Reports were presented from the suffrage states tending to show that only a small proportion of the women went to the polls at the recent general election, and that in few cases did they have a noticeable effect on political conditions.

Former Senator Root in a paper read today at the opening session, in which he outlined his reasons for opposition to the so-called constitutional amendment to enfranchise women.

"I am against having the constitution of the United States amended so as to impose woman suffrage on the states that do not wish it for it not merely or chiefly because my judgment does not approve of woman suffrage, but for a more vital reason," said Mr. Root's paper. "It is a destruction of the rights of self-government, and a subjection of the people of New York to the government of others. Having failed to obtain the assent to woman suffrage of such states as South Dakota, West Virginia, Ohio, New York and Pennsylvania, the advocates of woman suffrage now seek to compel such states to accept it against their will, and to compel them to carry on their local government and select their representatives in the national government in conformity to the opinion of the people of other states who are in favor of woman suffrage."

"I think such an attempt is contrary to the principles of liberty upon which the American Union was established and without which it cannot endure."

Sees Liberty Involved.
"Without the right of local government we should lose the better part of our liberty. This country is so large that the difference in climate, in physical characteristics, in capacity for production, in predominant industries, and in resultant habits of living and thinking are so great that there necessarily are wide differences of view as to the conduct of life, and to subject any section of the country to the dictation of the vast multitude of voters living in other parts of the country would create a condition of intolerable tyranny, and to use the power of the nation to bring about that condition would be to make the nation an instrument of tyranny. It is needless to argue that this would ultimately destroy the nation."

"The only exercise of national power for suffrage to prevent discrimination against the black race was made and justified only upon the same ground which justified the war and the emancipation proclamation, for the time being destroyed all local government in the seceding states. It establishes no precedent and justifies no attempt at control upon a less terrible and compelling cause."

PRODUCING SUGAR BEET SEEDS HERE IN UNITED STATES

Local Growers Will Be Interested to Know That United States is Planning to Furnish Home Grown Seed.

Sugar beet seed was grown commercially in this country during the past year in several states from Michigan to California. The crop of seed harvested in 1915 was so satisfactory according to the report of the chief of the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, in each of the areas tested that a largely increased acreage was planted this year.

This bureau has assisted in an advisory way in growing, selecting, and siloing the roots, planting them in the spring, harvesting and cleaning the seed, and, in general, endeavoring to produce the largest amount of commercial seed possible at a minimum cost. Approximately 5,000 acres are in beet seed in this country this year, while we require the product of at least 16,000 acres for a normal planting, not considering the natural expansion of the beet sugar industry. Each new mill will require an average of two hundred acres in seed to meet its planting requirements. Seven new mills are in process of construction for this year.

The problem of drying the sugar beets for the purpose of increasing the amount of raw material for the mill and thereby increasing the length of the sugar campaign has been further investigated. The principal difficulty has been in finding or devising a dryer of suitable capacity to handle enough beets per day to be profitable. A satisfactory solution of the problem will be very beneficial in those small valleys in the intermountain states, where the acreage is not sufficient to support a sugar mill, and yet the sugar beet is necessary to the highest results in the farming operations.

ASPHALT ON OAKLAND AVENUE TO COST LESS

Improvement to Be Less Than Assessment First Made Board of Public Works Discovers.

Asphalt pavement on Oakland avenue and Forest Park boulevard is not going to be as great a cost to property owners as originally figured. The assessment will be even lower than that figured originally.

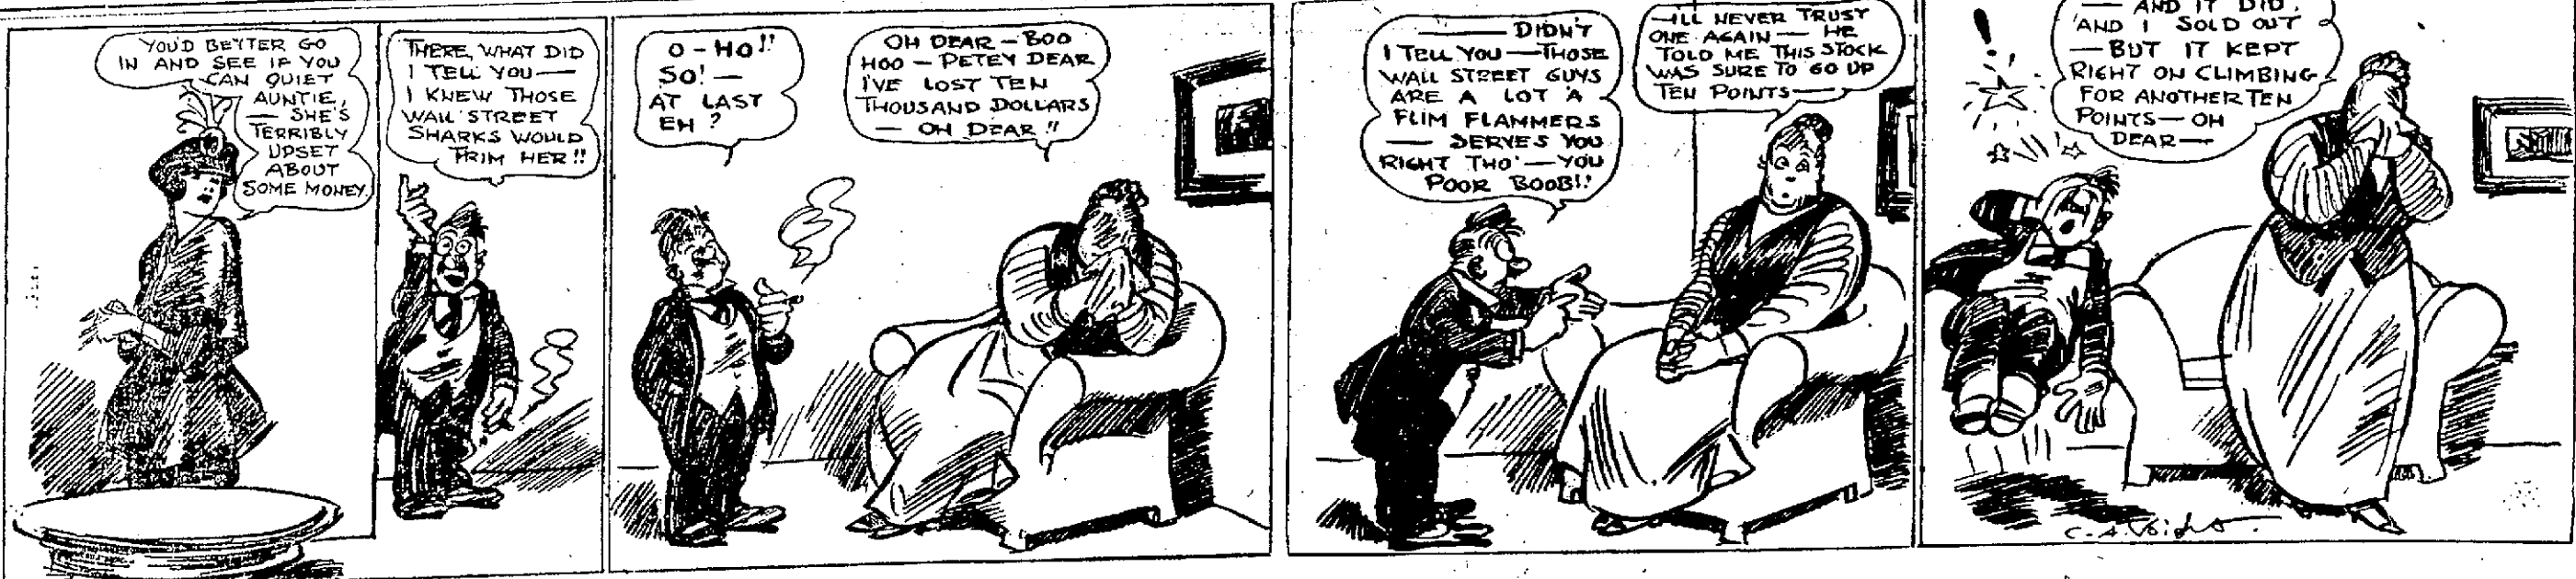

Announcement to this effect was made yesterday at the meeting of the board of public works, which was in session to consider the partial acceptance of the job. Just how much lower the cost will be under the assessment was not definitely known and will not be until City Engineer C. V. Kerch has finished his figuring. A resolution favoring Edwin Brown & Company's certificate of contract for the Oakland avenue job was passed.

HEMMING CENTER FOR BADGER FIVE AGAINST BELOIT

Former High School Star in Line for Pivot Job on Men's Badger Tossers This Season.

Vic Hemming, former Lakota club basketball star, also one in his high school days, has been picked as all-state center and captain at the Lawrence college championship games, is playing in rare form at Wisconsin today. Reports from Madison today say that Hemming will start at center Saturday night in the opening game of the Badger's schedule, against Beloit.

Meintz of Edgerton, is another Rock county boy making things hum at Madison. He is a forward and is also scheduled to start Saturday. Captain Lewis, known by Janesville fans, follows, since he played here last season in a couple of games, is the other forward. Olson and either Carlson or Meyers will play the guard positions.

Lewis is said to be playing a more aggressive game this season than during either of his two previous years at the university. The team as a whole is full of pep and prospects of Men's basketball are bright. Early season form cannot be taken as indication of final results, however, as was shown last year with Illinois. Starting the season in whirlwind fashion, the Illini, "ironed" everything. Through half their schedule they won the one best bet. Then they began to slip and skidded woefully in the last two games, particularly the one at Madison, when Big Nine honors were at stake.

At the present time Illinois is considered a top-heavy favorite in the conference. The Suckers have practically their entire team of the past year back.

MILWAUKEE SEEKS TRAPSHOOTERS' MEET

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 8.—Wisconsin trapshooters were to learn today what action the Interstate Trapshooters association will take on the application of officials of the Badger Gun club to stage the 1917 western championship in Milwaukee. The Milwaukee Gun club, made the application for the meet and is optimistic regarding Milwaukee's chances to land the shoot.

The conditions on which the association gives the handicap are as follows: The interstate association adds $500 to the purse, prints and mails the program, and the club pays all the expenses of its managers. The Badger Gun club offers to add $500 to the purse, furnish the equipment and the grounds for the tournament and, under all the profits, if Milwaukee lands the meet it will probably be staged here in June or July. In last year's shoot at St. Louis, W. J. Keith, of Portage, Wis., won first prize.

FIGHT FOR PRESIDENT OF THE A. A. LEAGUE

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 8.—The fight of T. M. Chivington, president of the American association, to land his job was the chief center of attraction at the annual meeting of the club owners of the league held at Indianapolis today.

Thomas A. Hickey, of Minneapolis, who was the first president of the league, was the candidate for Chivington's job. Before the meeting, it was rumored that Hickey had five supporters among the club owners—Mike Canfield, Minneapolis; J. W. Norton, St. Paul; A. K. Tamm, Milwaukee; E. M. Schomberg, Chicago; and O. H. Wanthan, of Louisville.

James McGill, Indianapolis, Roger Pressman, Toledo, and George Fabian were known to be supporting Chivington. The only one doubt existed about was Wanthan of Louisville who has never committed himself to support either candidate. In case it is necessary to compromise on a man, there are several candidates, among them being: Bobby Quinn, former business manager of the Columbus club, who resigned recently; Norris O'Neill, former president of the Western league; and Branch Riskey, business manager of the Toledo club.

WILL ELECT HICKEY ASSOCIATION HEAD

Indianapolis, Dec. 8.—Thos. J. Hickey of Indianapolis, will be elected president of the American association at the annual convention of the club owners here today to succeed Thos. M. Chivington, according to a poll taken after an all night conference. Up until an early hour this morning it appeared that Chivington would retain his position by O. H. Wanthan, president of the Louisville club, who held the balance of power, dislodged by his announcement that he would support the Indianapolis man.

ORGANIZE NEW GOLF LEAGUE IN STATE

Green Bay, Dec. 8.—H. O. Fairchild of Green Bay, who was elected temporary president of New Northwestern Wisconsin Golf Association, says there is no truth in the statement emanating from Oshkosh that the association means to protest against the Wisconsin Golf Association, or to interfere in any way with said golf tournament.

"The statement is an injustice to the management," said Mr. Fairchild today. "The management has been liberal. While Milwaukee and Kenosha golfers have been leaders in handling its business, some of the most influential members of the board of directors have been from other parts of the state. Instead of interfering with the state tournament, the northeastern organization will aid it by reducing the number of tournaments in the northern territory, thus increasing the entry in state tournaments. Seven or eight invitation tournaments held annually by clubs in the territory north of Milwaukee county, will be reduced to one or two held under direction of the new organization."

"Every club in the new association belongs to the state league. With the large number of players taking part in the state meets, it is necessary to hold tournaments on an eighteen-hole course and Milwaukee and Kenosha clubs have the only eighteen-hole course in the state now."

The only object of the Northwestern Wisconsin Golf Association is to discourage state tournaments by clubs in this section of the state, and to hold one or two tournaments yearly under the auspices of the association."

Both teams opened up strong as a 42-centimeter cannon in the first frame and closed in a tie, each team having 391 pins. The second game went to Janesville by seventy-two pins and the third by thirteen. Last night's victory gave the Janesville team a record of two wins and a single defeat with the Beloiters. MORRIS MILLER

A great chain of game refuges, stretching from north to south in the Sierra Nevada and along the Pacific coast, is being planned by officials of the forest service and of the California fish and game commission. These sanctuaries, in which no shooting will be allowed, will afford asylum for the rapidly decreasing wild life of California. Safety zones, for such in reality they are will provide places wherein the game may breed and raise their young in safety. There will be given an even break and a chance to multiply unmolested for the benefit of sportsmen. California already has 780,000 acres set aside for game refuges.

That pitchers cannot and therefore are not expected to hit the ball is readily proved by a glance at the 1915 National league averages. Of the last forty-two men in the standing thirty-four of them are pitchers, while the other eight are mostly regulars who have been four or more times batting in the bunch is .158, while the lowest is .075.

The astounding information comes from Evansville that the backers of the Central league club there may surrender their franchise and drop out of the game for a while. The impression was that under the administration of Harry Stahlhofer baseball in Evansville had been a great success and that the game had been put on a firm foundation there.

Eddie Collins considers Lefty Williams one of the best southpaws that has broken into the American league in years. Collins is a very great compliment. Collins pays the Chicago youngster, "Outside of Eddie Plank, no left-hander in the American league makes as close a study of his batters or pitches more intelligently to them than Williams."

Bill Donovan has hopes that Slim Love will win a regular place on the Yankee's pitching staff next season. Love simply lacks confidence in his own great ability. In batting practice, when he puts his stuff on the ball, Love usually has the Yankee hitters helpless. At such times his control is exceptional. When sent into a game wildness, as a rule, forces him to let up on his stuff, and his batting practice speed and curves are missing.

Bill Carrigan, as manager of the Boston Red Sox, certainly believed in preparedness. Carrigan had the best fortified team in the American league, from the standpoint of pinch players. Almost the sole duty of Outfielder Henrikson was to act as pinch hitter, while Mike McNally was the pinch base-runner of the aggregation. With a runner on second and a base hit near the ball game, McNally was invariably sent in to take the place of the runner on the second sack. In Carl Mayes, Carrigan boasted of the best pinch pitcher in the league. With his peculiar underhand style of delivery, he was a most difficult pitcher to hit when suddenly injected into the fray.

Eliminating one of the first division teams, the Boston Braves, the other three, Brooklyn, New York and Philadelphia, ran true to form by boasting of sixteen of the first twenty-five leading batsmen. Philadelphia had six, New York five and Brooklyn four. The other player—Catcher McCarthy—played part of the season with Brooklyn and part with the Giants, finished up with the latter team. McCarthy in eighty games hit .339, practically tying Chase, who took part in a great many more games for the lead.

When Walter Hoelke joined the Giants, coming from the Rochester team in the international league, the general feeling was that he would not find the National league pitchers very easy picking. It was admitted that Hoelke's fielding would satisfy. It was also believed that he would hold up his end as a base-runner, and he was credited with having plenty of gray matter. His strongest boosters, however, feared that he would fall short at the bat. All of which simply proves that the wisest men of the game can make mistakes. Hoelke showed up well in all departments but it was with the stick that he did his best work. He took part in thirty-four games, and in that time amassed the very best batting average in the National league, .351.

Hurt Sensitive Customer. An absent-minded clerk in a San Francisco sporting goods house recently cost the firm a good customer. The buyer asked to see some dog collars, selected one and paid for it. Right there the absent-minded one spoiled it all by asking: "Shall I wrap it up and send it, or will you wear it?"

Proof of Love. "I am satisfied that young Spoon over is desperately in love with my niece," stated the Old Coder. "He listened to my views on politics for nearly half an hour last night as if he really enjoyed hearing me."—Exchange.

AND HE DID. "You're wanted—down—down in our street—an' bring an ambulance!" "What's the trouble?" demanded the policeman, "and why bring an ambulance?" "Because," the kiddie explained, when he had recovered his breath, "mother's found the lady that pinched our doorman!"

Wittl, the famous French musician of the eighteenth century, had an exaggerated opinion of himself, as the following story shows. One day he was summoned to Versailles to play before Marie Antoinette and the court. The performance had begun; the opening bars of his favorite solo commanded breathless attention, when a cry was heard—

"Place for Monsieur le Comte d'Artois!"

At the sound Wittl immediately ceased playing, cast an indignant glance at his audience, placed his violin under his arms, and walked out of the place.

At a dinner at which he presided, the bishop of London entered into conversation with a vivacious young lady who, in the course of the talk, asked to be allowed to put a common to his lordship. Receiving ready permission, she merrily cried: "Well, then, does the butterfly because the tomato can?"

The bishop laughed heartily at the sally; but not so heartily as when, later, a young man approached him. "I want to know," said this person, "about that joke of Miss Brown's. She asked if the butterfly flew because the tomato could. Pray tell me what the joke is."

Dinner Stories

The young teacher had been having a trying time with her nature study class because Johnnie had covered her knee more than she did about birds and frogs and had assumed a derisive attitude in consequence. She appealed to the man principal, who replied, "Next time you have the class, let me know, and I'll come in and take charge of it. I think I can settle Johnnie."

He was duly called in and all went well at first. With confidence the principal said at the conclusion of the lesson, "Now you may each ask me one question." Johnnie had been silent up to this time. When it came his turn he rose and asked:

"Has a duck ever been at the home of Mrs. Jones to talk over the fashions and things and somewhere about the sixty-fifth lap of the conversation the caller referred to the young daughter of the host."

"By the way, dear," remarked Mrs. Brown inquisitively, "where is Minnie? I haven't seen her for an age."

"Minnie is at college," promptly responded the fond mother, and then added: "And I am so worried about her. I haven't had a letter for nearly two weeks."

"Where is where you make a mistake," was the prompt rejoinder of Mrs. Brown. "Instead of letting her go to college why don't you send her to one of those correspondence schools?"

INDUSTRIAL STATUS OF PARENTS EFFECTS CHILDREN'S WELFARE

Infant Mortality Greater Where Father's Earnings Are Low or Where Mother Works Away From Home.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Dec. 8.—That children's welfare from infancy to adulthood is bound up with industrial conditions is emphasized by the recent work of the Federal Children's Bureau of which the chief, Miss Julia C. Lathrop, tells in her fourth annual report made public today.

A study of infant mortality in Manchester, N. H., completed this year, adds new evidence that when the father's earnings are low or the mother works out of the home the infant mortality rate is exceptionally high. In Manchester it varies from one death among every four babies where fathers earn less than $450, to one death among every sixteen babies where fathers earn $1,000 or more.

Miss Lathrop's report refers to the effect of living conditions upon mothers and points out that the sickness or death of the mother lessens the baby's chances for life and health. She has prepared a statistical study of infant mortality and finds that 15,000 mothers died each year in this country from largely preventable causes incident to maternity where the death rate from maternal causes has not decreased since 1900.

Miss Lathrop says in commenting upon this fact: "The means of the mother are the instruction of the mother, skilled supervision before the birth of her child, and suitable care during confinement. But she must have also something food and sufficient rest and freedom from anxiety—in other words, decent living conditions."

Then the bureau has been concerned with the protection of the child from the mother's employment. It has published all the child labor laws in the United States and has compiled a report on the administration of the employment certificate system in New York state. In commenting upon the new federal child labor law as marking a distinct advance in the attitude of this nation toward the child, she says: "The child who is under 16 years of age, Miss Lathrop says:

"Merely keeping the child out of the children is useless to the nation unless they are brought on to adult life trained masters of their full powers of body and mind. The law, national measure, and the attainable information for a better understanding of the ways in which the children pass from labor may be started in life should be furnished by a national study."

It is a matter of speculation as to what proportion of children at work are dependent upon their own earnings or support families in whose care they are. Also the number of dependent children now supported by public and private funds is unknown. In fact, Miss Lathrop says, "our ignorance is great. The report gives figures about Philadelphia indicating that the majority of dependent children are members of families and the question of relieving them is a question of family structure and support. Preliminary work toward a study of dependency has been done in the bureau and Miss Lathrop expresses the hope that Congress may direct the children's bureau to make a special inquiry into the condition of the children to be affected by the federal law."

RUSH OF APPLICANTS SEEKING FARM LOANS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Dec. 8.—Officials of the Farm Loan Board, announced today that more than 50,000 farmers have applied for mortgages and loans aggregating approximately $150,000,000 or more than seventeen times the amount of money which will be immediately available for loans upon the organization of the twelve farm loan banks.

Most of the applications have come from the south and west. They still continue to come in by hundreds every day. Requests for applications for mortgages, contemplating requests for loans of $200 or more, have come from Iowa alone.

Although the location of the banks probably will not be announced before December 20, it was said today that almost immediately after organization the banks would find it necessary to issue bonds for virtually their entire capital stock to meet the demands of borrowers.

LAND TAX WILL NOT WORK IN WISCONSIN

Milwaukee Man Declares Howe's Plan Would be Unsuccessful in This State.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Frederick W. Howe, United States commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island, New York, who advocated government ownership of railroads and straight land tax before the immigration section of the national conference on marketing and farm products here today, said that the reason is that the owners of desired lands have the votes and the taxes. The way it worked out in practice is that a lot of improvements are not taxed as they should be under the law and the undeveloped land gets a full assessment. I know one farm that is assessed on a $100 valuation. It has stock and buildings on it. In an equal area of undeveloped land adjoining it with practically worthless timber is assessed on a $400 valuation. That's the way your land tax works out in Wisconsin. Not by law, but by human nature of those who administer the taxing function.

Government ownership also felt the ire of Mr. Howe. He said the federal law is a failure for allowing literature which sent would be farmers to failure and disappointment, as he claimed most of them were on government irrigation projects, ought to be in jail.

"I feel the same as you do as to that," said Mr. Howe amid applause.

Mr. Howe said most of the farmers fail because of not having their honest earnings. They had no money to develop and live over the first cropless year or years.

ENGLAND WILL WISH SIMPLE YET MERRY XMAS THIS SEASON

London, Dec. 8.—"Wish you a simple Christmas" is to be the Christmas greeting in England this year. In other words, self-denial, but a self-denial free from dismalness—is to be the keynote of the country's Yuletide season. Festive extravagance, riotous indulgence and thoughtless debauchery are to give place to simplicity, joy, thankfulness and thoughts for the wounded, the sufferers, and the soldiers and sailors who are fighting for their country.

The advent of the food dictator and the realization by the British people that after two years of war there is urgent need for the husbanding of their food stores, is responsible for the simple Christmas. The two previous Christmases in the war were celebrated according to tradition—time of feasting and festivity and relaxation; and of charity also. But conditions have altered. The altered realities of war have brought to the people, so that the necessity for greater self-denial is more apparent. Economy and retrenchment will be the watchword this Christmas.

Already President Runciman of the board of trade has told the hotel proprietors that they will have to eliminate gala dinners and the usual entertainments. Some of the leading hotels had already prepared elaborate dinners for Christmas and New Year's at from $5 to $10 a plate. Still others had applied for an extension of the closing hours until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning just as they do in New York and other big cities of the United States.

But the liquor control board put its foot down on this. This body, which refused even till the 1st of January, has now refused almost since the beginning of the war, namely 12 o'clock to 4:30 in the afternoon and 6:30 to 9 in the evening, will remain undisturbed during the Christmas season.

To say that this refusal of the authorities to "listen to reason" as the hotel men and caterers put it, has been disappointing is not to mind. It was a frequent meeting at which appeals were drawn up, but all to no avail. Mr. Runciman told the hotel men that unless they revised their menus and reduced the cost of their food and drink, the liquor reform board said something about taking away licenses and shutting up the places just as they sometimes do in American cities. The hotel men were told that it was not a question whether or not they would set a good example to others, but an actual matter of food shortages and the possibility that by buying and eating too profusely of these things they will imperil the food supply of others is beginning to be realized.

Among the signs of a simpler Christmas will be the abandonment of decorated displays in butchers', poultrymen's and provision shops. With the approach of the holiday season the war savings committee renewed its campaign. Its mottoes were: Hospitality without Extravagance. Humor without Hate. The Best Christmas Present—A War Savings Certificate. Still another patriotic organization, in its campaign for economy in meat, bread, tea, alcohol, sugar, butter, etc., distributed this placard: "If you are extravagant placard: 'If you are extravagant put up prices, and help to prolong the war.'"

LOSS OF CRAIOVA BLOW TO RUMANIA

Craiova, (also spelled Krajova), which has fallen before the German forces invading Rumania by way of the Jiu valley, through the Vulcan Pass, is the subject of the following war geography bulletin issued by the National Geographic society.

The fall of Craiova is a severe blow to Rumania, for, in addition to being an important railway center, it is the headquarters of the first army corps, the seat of a military academy and of great importance is the fact that here is located an immense tannery which supplies the Rumanian army with its leather.

The country surrounding Craiova is not excellent in fertility anywhere in the kingdom. The town is in the center of the Wallachian wheat lands, and the truck gardens of the region are highly productive while the forests which clothe the adjacent uplands make it an important timber depot. A branch railway conveys these products to the Danube at Calafat, some 50 miles to the southwest in an airline. The Jiu river, which rises in the Carpathians beyond the Rumanian border, flowing south and entering the Danube opposite the Bulgarian town of Rahova after a course of 200 miles, passes a mile or two to the west of Craiova.

"While trade in cereals, leather and lumber is the chief occupation of the Craiova in peace times, there are several large rope and carriage factories located here, and the salt mines of the vicinity are profitably worked. The town has shown a steady growth for the last quarter of a century until now, with 51,000 inhabitants, it is the sixth city of the nation. It is 112 miles west of Bucharest, 44 miles north of the Danube at Rahova, and is the most important station on the railway line of 237 miles between the Hungarian border town of Verclorova (beyond the Iron Gates) and the Rumanian capital.

"Craiova was the Castra Nova of the Romans during their occupation of Dacia, and in the middle ages the place played an important role. It was here that the Wallachian prince, Mircea the Old defeated the Turkish sultan, Bayezid I, in 1397. Two hundred years later the most famous of Wallachian chieftains, Michael the Brave, held sway here as 'ban' or governor, afterwards becoming prince not only of Wallachia, but of Moldavia and Transylvania as well, thus for a brief period uniting under one ruler the whole Rumanian people, the end for which modern Rumania is fighting today.

"The Jiu, which is the standard of value in Rumania, was the first coined in Craiova. It derives its name from the figure of a lion stamped on the early coins. Its value is equal to that of the French franc (nineteen cents and a fraction).

"Craiova was for centuries the capital of Little Wallachia, that division of the country lying between the Alt (Aluna) river and the Hungarian and Serbian boundaries to the west."

ONLY CIVIL WAR MAJ. GENERAL, IS DETAINED IN GERMANY; WANTS TO RETURN TO U. S. A.

Duisburg, Germany, Dec. 8.—In a little apartment on Hindenburgstrasse today sits an old American general, who is waiting for the war to end so he can return to the United States.

This aged hero of Lincoln's day is Major General Osterhaus, only surviving Major General of the Civil War, father of Admiral Osterhaus of the U. S. navy and grandfather of Lieutenant Osterhaus, U. S. N. Major General Osterhaus will soon be 85.

The general, whose hair and beard are creamy white, sat in his library reading war news when American newspaper men called today to pay their respects. He is vigorous and alert and appears still to be in his seventies. His joy at seeing Americans was great and he beamed with happiness. Repeatedly he asked that his greetings be sent to America and to say that he was "going back" as soon as the war was ended.

Major General Osterhaus discussed many phases of the war with the greatest zeal. He is a great admirer of Field Marshal von Hindenburg and he believes the war would have been ended long ago if Hindenburg had been the general staff at the beginning.

"Hindenburg is the greatest general the world has produced," he said. "He would have defeated Napoleon the first day."

Major General Osterhaus' library is like an old Civil War museum. One of his desks, I believe, was given to him by President Johnson. On his desk were autograph photos of Lincoln, Johnson and other American statesmen of the Civil War period. He has the keenest recollection of frequent meetings with Lincoln and members of his cabinet. Johnson appointed him American consul at Havre, France, after the Civil War. Before that he was the first governor general of Louisiana after the state was admitted to the Union.

POPE PRESENTED RED CAPS TO TWO NEW CARDINALS

Rome, Dec. 8.—Two new cardinals were given the red cap by the Pope at his public consistory here today.

Both new cardinals are former papal nuncios. They are Mgr. Count Raffaele Schrapnell, former papal nuncio at Vienna, and Mr. Fruewirth, former papal nuncio at Munich.

Pope Benedict will deliver an address in which he will outline the Vatican's neutral attitude in the war and pray for a cessation of hostilities as soon as possible. He will make a plea for the continuance of Catholic prayers for peace throughout the world. This public consistory follows the secret consistory of the Pope on December 4.
